technology towards the realization of a sustainable smart city in the region.

Wanga affirmed that the programme would provide hyperlocal air quality insights that will guide policy implementers and local leaders to make informed decisions and support their actions to improve the City's climate and health.

"The project supports Kisumu's efforts to close the existing air quality data gaps by offering solutions that bridge the gap between policy and the actual air quality infrastructure. Kisumu City authorities and residents will use the data to monitor the city's progress in air quality and take action to achieve cleaner air objectives," stated Wanga.

Speaking on behalf of Govern-

A section of Kisumu CBD. The city has rolled out an air quality management project that will help mitigate air pollution in the area.

nor Anyang Nyong'o at the same event, the County Secretary John Auma hailed the initiative saying it would enhance the living standards of the city residents.

Clean air, he affirmed, will help the city accrue many benefits including good health, a prosperous economy and improved agricultural production.

AirQo founder Prof Baina Mugisha said that the organization's aspiration is to work with Kisumu and all other African Cities to better manage air quality and achieve clean air in the cities.

luxurious whiskies, brandy and vodka. Dealers in fake products are also increasingly targeting far-flung villages. We will tighten surveillance in major towns and even if they go to remote areas, we will pursue them," declared the administrator.

The Kenya Revenue Authority (KRA) has documented several cases where illegal manufacturers have been packaging substandard alcohol in premium brand bottles complete with KRA excise stamps and even manufacturer and distributor batch numbers.

In an interview with the Kenya News Agency at his office, Maalim said besides posing serious public health and safety challenges, the illegal dealers in the alcoholic beverages industry do not pay tax and thus deny legitimate players a level-playing ground and the economy the much-needed revenues to grow.

Statistics from the Kenya Revenue Authority (KRA) indicate that local manufacturers lose $42 million (Sh5.1 billion) to counterfeiters while the government loses $80 million (9.75 billion) as potential tax revenue yearly.

The Regional Commissioner indicated that some of these illegal businesses further drive other forms of crime such as money laundering, drug trafficking, petty crimes and terrorism.

Maalim further said the RRI Initiative will rope in officers from National Government Administration Office (NGAO), the National Police Service (NPS), Kenya Revenue Authority (KRA), among other state agencies.
